REMINISS OF S.G.S. RUGBY by John Lansbury Sale. North West Counties, Cheshire and Barbarians.

Halfway through my education in the Junior School, an event happened to me which influenced my whole life. A trainee Schoolmaster introduced me to a strange leather oval-shaped ball. So started the obsession of my life which was to dominate my education, career and family life for nearly thirty years.

My early instructional year in the first form was conducted by Mr Eddie Bromley before joining the Bantams Team under the influence of Mr. Peter Brown. Following this, I played in all of the teams in the school, my latter years being instructed by Mr. Bill Johnson and finally by Mr. Frank Norris.

No long away trips for us! Our longest away trip was the visit to Liverpool College: far throw from the present day tour.

I have been fortunate in my Rugby career to have played at most levels for I have never considered myself to have the talent of stars such as Tony Neary and Steve Smith. However the discipline of training which I learnt at Stockport Grammar School enabled me to, in some way, overcome these deficiencies.

The Social Camarderie of rugby has led me to make many friends in many parts of the world and I am sure that the boys on this trip will meet many people and make friendships some of which will last a lifetime.

I hope that this trip will be an, incentive for the boys to continue to play after leaving school and will be a springboard to many more enjoyable years in the game.

I am confident whatever the results of this tour that the boys will leave a profound impression of our School wherever they go. I wish them a successful and enjoyable tour.

TOUCHDOWN! The World

Trip Vision

'The Quincentenary' they said. 'The what ?' '1487' had been a catchword at Stockport Grammar School for - well I suppose centuries. 'How long has Mr. X. been at S.G.S. ?' 'Since 1487' or 'Why do you do it that way ?' 'Listen, it's been done like this since 1487' etc. So were the rugby enthusiasts going to do anything special? The start of the academic year 1983 - 4 the idea was formed. 'A World tour' said S.H.D. '---- !!!' replied L.P.K. but gradually the vision took root. An initial meeting with parents of the then 2nd,4th, and 5th year rugby players was called in the November. The most crucial element was the formation of a steering committee of keen, enthusiastic and extremely hard working parents. Our thanks to these people are unlimited. Gullivers Travels were contacted and eventually an ambitious tour of 4 weeks was agreed. The fund raising was both varied and interesting, ranging from a sponsored run, wine tasting, the sale of Xmas trees, through to an import of a 'quincentennnial wine' Shaa Vin (named after our founder) and many other ideas. Without a doubt it's been hard work and fun but from the 7th July 'til 9th August 1987 the vision will become a reality and 26 Stopfordians will have an experience of a lifetime.

The hard facts of touring by MIKE BURTON

Played 17 times for England, represented the Barbarians and made 6 major overseas tours with Gloucester, Gloucestershire, England and the British Lions.

Nothing stirs the heart of rugby men more than the prospect of an overseas tour with the lads.

What better way to spend the summer?

The uncertainty of team selection, the relief when your name is called out. "I knew I'd go, I've been training for weeks you know". The extrovert prop bolts back another pint of flat beer (he'll be good value as a tourist), showing no consideration for the rejected players graciously nodding their "Well done's and "Have a good time" through plastic smiles that hardly begin to hide their disappointment.

The Tour Manager weighs in with his first speech of the tour.

" First of all let me say that selection was not easy with so many good players available (those not selected leave the room spitting sparks) and to those of you who are fortunate enough to be going, remember that you will be judged as much off the field as you are on it. You will not only be representing yourself and your families, but your country as well. You are to all intents and purposes ambassadors, make sure I have no occasion to reprimand any of you."

And so the tour begins, weeks before you have been measured for your tour blazer, tried it on in the privacy of you r own room, and trained as if there was no tomorow. You arrive at Gatwick as fit as a fiddler's bitch, sporting a fresh haircut and carrying 20 letters/messages for people who emigrated out there years ago and amazingly know half the people in your town. The Manager faces his first test. The star outside half has left his passport at home and the first team hooker has lost his air ticket. His face goes red and he struts, barking orders at the Assistant Manager who is really the Coach and has no administrative ability at all. The Coach shrugs, the Manager goes even redder and after much negotiation with airport officials his team finally boards the plane. The Manager poses for press photographs grinning broadly with his arms around the Coach and the 1st Team hooker

One piece of advice offered to me by a famous Englih hooker was always wear something casual on a long flight and change back into your uniform before you get off at the other end, because local dignitaries and other alickadoos will be there to meet you, and I well remember going off on my first tour when I sat for 18 hours in a posh blazer, flannels and tie while all the experienced tourists who had put a T-shirt and a track-suit bottom or jeans in their hand luggage enjoyed a much more leisurely journey than I. The flight itself always shows signs of things to come, the tour comedians begin to emerge at this early stage and although it would not do to have 15 of them in a team these lads are always worth their weight in gold to a touring party for they make happy times happier and in the event of a catastrophe, an injured team mate or a lost match they have immense value as morale boosters.

Probably the lowest point of any tour is booking into a hotel in the early hours of the morning after a long and tiring flight. Everybody's off form and just needs bed. These are the timews when team spirit faces its sternest examination. Your bag is last to be unloaded from the coach your number is not known to the busy receptionist who runs her finger up and down the list of names saying, "Well, I can't see you here". On top of that one of your team mates has taken your suitcase to his room by mistake and you have to find him before you can find your pyjamas. When you do find him he is asleep and annoyed that you have woken him up. Please don't SHOUT AT HIM, CALL HIM NAMES, MUMBLE UNDER YOUR BREATH YOUR HONEST OPINION OF HIM or THINK ANY WORSE OF HIM. In the morning you will be training together and last night doesn't matter.

The first session

The bus that is to take you to the training field fails to turn up and the Manager shows remarkable cool in arranging to borrow the two hotel mini-buses and getting the lads there on time. (Perhaps he is not going to be so bad after all). Props and locks hit the corner flag as they play at drop goals, wings and fly halves stretch off hamstrings and the Coach makes his first appearance.

Track-suited, whistle around his neck, "OK lads, come in, form a circle". He announces the team for that so vital first match, "I'm sorry we can only pick 15 of you at a time, and all the lads left out this time will be given a run in the second game".

The lads nod acceptance and begin the warm-up, lapping the field, forwards with that 'when are you going to stop' look on their faces, threequarters scuttling off lengths in the lead.

The selected team work-out together that morning and every morning up to match day. This is always the most important day of any tour, as the legendary W.J. McBride said, "This will put the show on the road". And what a day from the moment you wake up! The trip to the ground, the pre-match team talk, the smell of linament, the nervous dressing-room small talk, the clatter of studs in the tunnel as the team takes the field and the noise that hits your ears as you emerge into the d aylight.

The game is on.

You have taken your first tackle, felt the joy of seeing that ponce of a winger with ten A levels, a sports car and a perfect hair-do, put your side 4 points up, only to be level at half time when their flanker crashes through after two knock-ons and a forward pass.

The game over, and now down to the business. Post-match functions normally so boring are really quite interesting when you have won. "Beer's nice, bit like our lager". The lads are set for a good night. The Captains heap praise on each others teams and the Manager makes a brilliant speech, (I think he's a good bloke really), thanks to our hosts and presents a shield and a tie.

Now, as one of yesterday's men and with my touring days behind me, I look enviously towards the lads of Stockport Grammar, young men going off to share the experience of a life-time, the sight-seeing, the friendship which as well as the rugby, will provide them with a cupboard full of memories to be treasured for the rest of their lives.

ENJOY YOURSELVES, LADS, AND GO CAREFUL!

GEOGRAPHICAL ASPECTS - DATE JULY 7 1987. CAPTAINS

LOG STAR.

SAN FRANSISCO is an important seaport situated on a peninsula, which encloses San Fransisco Bay. The Golden Gate bridge which spans the entrance to the bay, has one of the longest suspension type spans in the world. (The second Biggest is on Fozzy' shorts !) The city is the chief financial centre of the West, and has scientific, educational and cultural institutions. It has several other institutions, and Blob our self appointed cultural attache will be providing a sypnosis on arrival. The city lies on the infamous San Andreas Fault, a line of weakness in the Earth's crust that has been the cause of many earthquakes in the region, in particular in 1906 when a large proportion of the city was destroyed. The Seismological Institute has been informed of our arrival time due to our 'lightweight cargo' of Fozzy and Xavier.

HAWAII'S, home of the famous 50 (no not Deadly's form). The Hawaiian Island Group consists of more than 20 islands situated 2,000 miles south west of the U.S.A. The capital, Honolulu, is the base for our stay and is situated on the Island of Oahu. Hawaiians are descended from varied peoples, and include the early Polynesians, and later, Americans, Chinese, Europeans and Puerto Ricans. The economy is heavily dependant on tourism but was originally based on fishing and agriculture, to this day it still exports sugar cane and pineapples. A traditional Hawaiian greeting is given to all visitors, they are greeted by Hawaiian girls and garlanded with flowers.Our cultural attache will be given diplomatic immunity on arrival to avoid any embarassing moments and for the safety of the Hawaiian girls. If we ever leave the Pacific Paradise and Blob gets his bail, the Tour moves on to New Zealand.

NEW_ZEALAND lies 1,000 miles south east of Australia, and consists of two large islands with several smaller islands. North Island contains almost two thirds of the total population and extends 500 miles fromnorth to south. South Island is sperated from North Island by the 16 mile wide Cook Strait. Both Islands are volcanically active, and on North Island there is an area around Rotorua where hot springs and boiling mud pools are found. A similar area can be found after Millns and Dom have been for a post match curry. Some of the hot springs are geysers, which periodically shoot up a tall column of hot water and steam. No doubt several of the Tour Squad will wish to participate in this thrilling natural sauna. Approximately 7% of the population are Maori, these are descendants of the Polynesian peoples who sailed to the islands some 700 years ago. It is believed that Biss will be making a concerted effort to trace his roots on this part of the visit.Communications are very good in New Zealand, and despite being geographically remote it is a very prosperous country due to its excellent international links.

AUSTRALIA: a country that is also an island continent. proximately 75% the size of Europe, Australia consists of six states, two mainland territories, and eight external territories. Our Tour is based in the South East around Sydney and Melbourne, unfortunately for Len, who is an expert on the sheep stations of Western Australia: despite this it is hoped he can broaden our horizons while down under. The two Birts will sadly be confined to the hotel in Australia because their rugby styles are so similar to the movements of the native kangaroo, it is feared they may disappear up a possums pouch. Once free from the clutches of the Sheilas (remember the song) the Tour moves to Fiji.

FLIL consists of 322 volcanic islands in the Melanesian Archipelago in the South pacific. This island group covers some 7,083 square miles with a population of roughly half a million. The capital is Suva, which is situated on the Island of Viti Levu. The island economy is based on traditional agriculture supplemented by tourism. The most common crops are, bananas, coconuts, sugar cane, rice and cotton. Several members of the party will be making an in depth study into the factors which account for the size of the native Fijian. Trev will be devising the questionnaire and that well known professor of mathematics, Jez, will be analysing the data. From Fiji the final destination is Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES stands astride the river of the same name 18 miles from the Pacific Coast. The city has a population of approximately 3 million and is the third largest city in America. Los Angeles is best known as the centre of the American film industry. Nevett and Carlin are reputed to have been offered contracts by several of the major studios after their respective performances in last year's School Musical: Colin will be selling doughnuts and Tony ice creams. Due to the prescence of a younger element in the party, a visit to Disneyland has been organised so that Ollie can meet Dumbo and Metz can meet Tinkerbell. If the party ever gets this far it will return on 9th August to England.
